INDOOR CAT NUTRITION

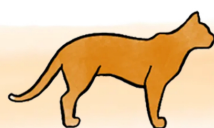

Just like us, indoor cats have specific nutritional and dietary needs. Here are some tips for providing your indoor cat with the right nutrition to help them stay happy and healthy.

DOES YOUR CAT REQUIRE WEIGHT MAINTENANCE OR MANAGEMENT?

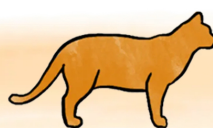

Indoor cats tend to be less active, so helping them manage and maintain a healthy weight is important. Does your indoor cat require a Weight Management or Weight Maintenance recipe, and what is the difference?

THE IMPORTANCE OF HYDRATION

Do you feel like your indoor cat doesn't use their water bowl enough? Cats have a very low thirst drive, so it's important to ensure they're getting enough hydration in their daily life.

CURB YOUR INDOOR CAT'S HAIRBALLS

Your indoor cat can end up in a hairy situation by getting hairballs due to grooming and other factors. Thankfully there's an easy way to help prevent them with the right nutrition.

What are hairballs?

When cats groom themselves, they often ingest fur that can accumulate and end up being regurgitated, causing health issues.

What prevents hairballs?

Diet and grooming can play a large role in preventing hairballs and symptoms. Regularly grooming your cat, as well as feeding them a fiber-rich diet, can both help prevent and alleviate hairballs.

LITTER BOX 101

We all know where your cat's food goes, and ACANA™ dry cat food can help support your cat's digestion to help make litterbox cleanup a little easier. Here's how you can help make your indoor cat feel more comfortable when nature calls.

What litter do they prefer?

There are many different types of litter, and cats have strong sensory preferences. We recommend trying different types at first to determine what you and your cat like best.

What kind of box do they want?

It's important to choose a litter box that makes your cat feel comfortable. Depending on your cat's life stage, they may prefer one with easier access. Test different boxes to see what your cat prefers.

Location, location, location!

Cats prefer their litter box to be in a safe, convenient area. Make sure you place it in an area they typically wander into or explore often to make it easy for them to find.
