Who are we?

Origio Botanicals offers a new line of essential oils grown and distilled by the people of Madagascar.

We know our customers want natural, organic solutions they can trust. That's why we work tirelessly to keep our products safe and effective.

We only work with small, independent growers to help keep quality high. Our ingredients come from remote, untouched land. The organic, chemical-free techniques used by our growers help not only our workers but also the planet.

At Origio, we want to connect the people involved in production to the people who buy from us. That's why all of our production stays fully transparent. We want to maintain a stellar relationship with our producers and protect the precious lands of our beautiful island.

ABOUT ORIGIO BOTANICALS

Our Story

Our company wants to do more than create the best essential oils today. We also want to challenge industry standards and support the environment at every opportunity. That's why we work with farmers, distillers, and bottlers here in Madagascar.

Their hard work helps us create potent, pure oils without exception. The high quality of each essential oil reflects the connection our farmers and distillers have with each ingredient. They spend every day out on the land working with each fruit, flower, and herb so that our customers can experience the scents and natural benefits of Malagasy products.

Unlike other products, our ingredients come from remote, untouched land tilled by independent farmers. Our handcrafted oils get lab tested so we can guarantee the highest level of purity and effectiveness to you, our customer.

At Origio, we want to connect the people involved in production to the people who buy from us. That's why we maintain full transparency; to build a great relationship with our producers and our discerning customers.

Origio founder Ryan Kelley moved to Madagascar 14 years before starting Origio Botanicals. His fascination with local flora and the people who work the land inspired him to create organic essential oils and sell them around the world. He travelled Madagascar from the northern tip to the furthest parts of the south to research of local plants and their uses to help him create a strong line of oils.

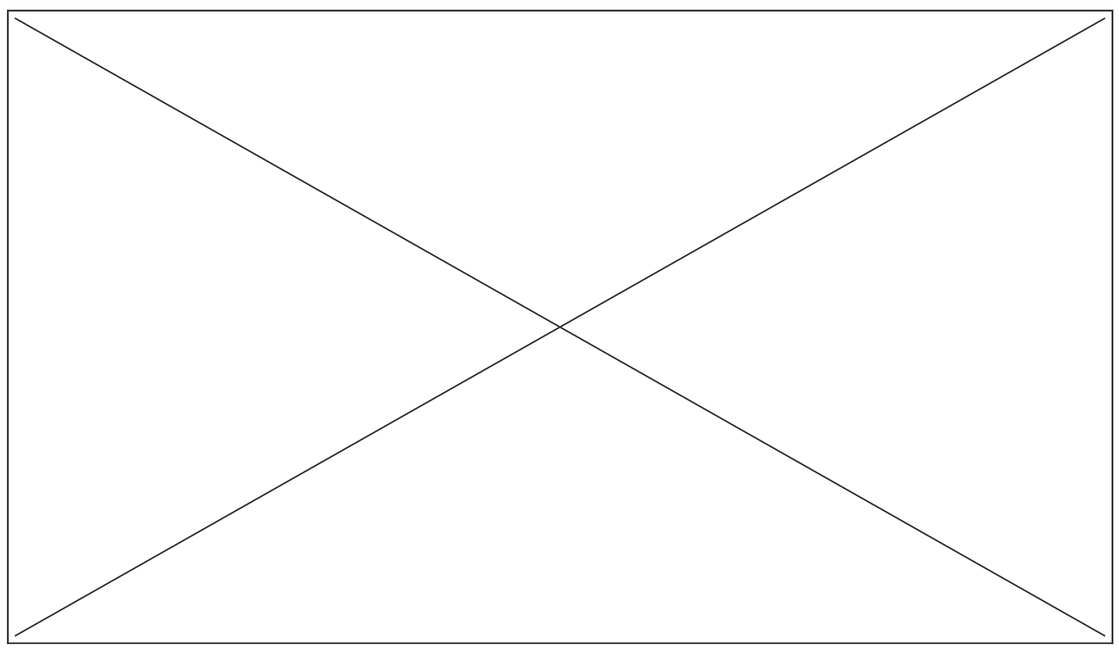

Driven to help the local farmers who grew the herbs, flowers, and fruits for his company, Ryan contracted local growers. He wanted to help them and their communities thrive financially while protecting their environment.

Beyond helping farmers, Ryan wanted to respond to the global call for better, healthier, more ethically sourced products with quality essential oils.

With the help of his local farmers and distillers, Origio Botanicals created organic products designed to help users sleep, feel calm, have better skin and hair, even breathe deeper. The essential oils they created blew everyone away. Every oil's potency, incredible scent, and effectiveness of each far exceeded their expectations. The team knew they had to get them out to the world.

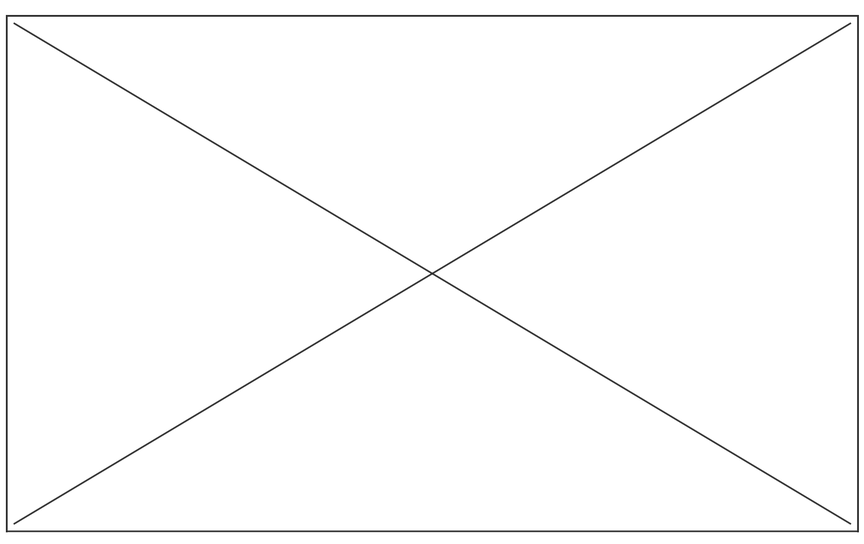

Today, Origio Botanicals works hard to connect our customers with Malagasy communities distilling the world's finest essential oils. We offer customers a natural way to improve their lives and connect with one of the most beautiful places on Earth.

HOW WE MAKE AND BOTTLE ORIGIO BOTANICALS

We start with sustainable, organic farms

Our growers use traditional techniques to keep their crops organic, the soil healthy, and create the purest oils possible. Their dedication to the land and its preservation means exceptiona quality for you.

Click play to hear directly from our farmers.

The plants move to the distillery

Each round of plants gets processed at the nearest distillery.

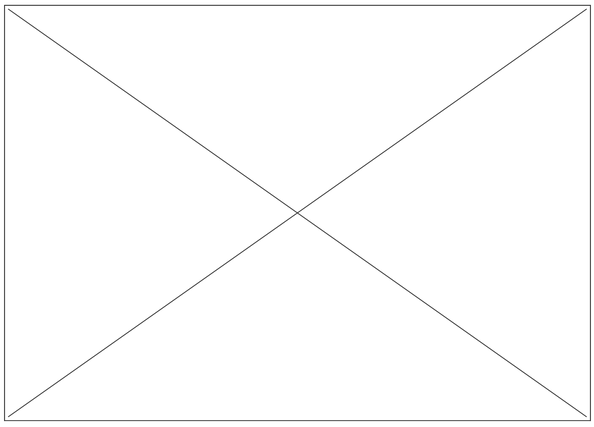

Our distillers use an artisanal process to keep the amount of handling and processing minimal. That means your oils have the highest potency possible.

Watch the video to see our distillers at work.

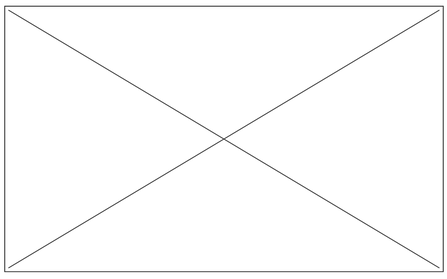

We bottle and ship

The moment an oil is ready, our workers get them packaged so you receive your order fast.

We use a priority shipping service to make sure you get your essential oils within a week. Your satisfaction and wellness is our priority, which is why we focus on exceptional quality, speedy delivery, and exemplary customer service.
