Is there a P&C insurance market in Greenland?

Yes—but Greenland does not have its own large, independent P&C insurance market in the way that countries like Denmark or Norway do. The population is very small (about 57,000), and there isn't a broad domestic property & casualty industry writing a full range of commercial and personal lines like you'd see in bigger markets.

Instead, what exists in Greenland is more localized coverage and agency representation of larger insurers, plus specialized risk products:

Local Insurance Presence & Intermediaries
There are local insurance agencies and brokers operating in Greenland that help place insurance for residents and businesses with insurers in Denmark or the wider Nordic market. For example, a local agency* works with Codan A/S to serve customers in Greenland.

> * Greenland Global Insurance LLC appears as an independent agency focused on helping find coverage, though not a full underwriter itself.

Specialized Coverage Required by Local Authorities
Greenland has specific insurance requirements such as search and rescue (SAR) insurance for expeditions and activities in remote areas, which is offered locally and required by authorities. This is a niche, risk-specific form of coverage rather than a broad P&C market.

Integration with Danish/Nordic Insurance Frameworks
Insurance written for risks in Greenland is treated in regulatory terms under Danish non-life (P&C) insurance systems, including participation in the Danish Guarantee Fund for non-life insurers on certain classes. That suggests some policies covering property, motor, and other standard P&C risks are written through Danish-licensed insurers or via cross-border services.
Residents also often rely on travel or international insurance plans (e.g., travel medical or evacuation coverage) from larger international insurers, rather than a broad indigenous market.

Bottom Line: Greenland itself isn't large enough to support a stand-alone, multi-carrier P&C insurance market similar to those in Denmark or Norway. Instead, insurance services there are delivered through local agencies and foreign carriers (mostly Danish/Nordic), supplemented by specific required products like SAR and travel medical coverages. Coverage for traditional lines (auto, property, liability) typically comes via providers licensed in Denmark or broader Nordic insurance markets, rather than Greenland-based incumbents.
