RE: Abigail Wensell

I am pleased to provide this letter of support to recommend Abigail Wensell, my student at Duquesne University, for a teaching position in your school. I have had the pleasure of teaching Abigail in undergraduate and graduate Special Education courses. I also share the privilege of being on an education committee for a nationally recognized professional organization (i.e., Vocational Evaluation and Career Assessment Professionals; VECAP)with Abigail, where she serves as a student representative. In this position, Abigail contributes to VECAP's mission of improving and advancing the fields of vocational evaluation and career assessment services by supporting the planning of monthly webinars and annual conferences.

I attest to Abigail's scholarly, teaching, and creative potential and promise, considering the quality of work she has produced, presented, and submitted during my class activities and assignments as her professor and also in VECAP's educational committee meetings. Abigail exceeded the course's minimum requirements to submit quality work demonstrating the critical thinking and problem-solving skills expected of a Special Educator.

Abigail is a good listener, patient, respectful, self-driven, ambitious, and appreciative of diversity. She is also very passionate about General Education and Special Education. In addition, she is a dedicated team player who does not shy from making meaningful contributions to scholarly discussions in class and VECAP's Education Committee, making her a suitable fit for a teaching or any educationally related program position.

Given Abigail's experience in different areas of academics and teaching roles, I highly recommend that you consider her for the position. Abigail will not only bring on board her qualification from the Duquesne University leading teacher program as a B.S.Ed. and an M.S. Ed Degree holder, but she will also bring the added advantage of having experienced some rigorous master-level classes at Duquesne University and possessing some good qualities expected of a Special Educator.

Sincerely,

Cliff G. Oliech, Ph.D.
