
Sam $lams shoppers

Sam's Club members are about to spend a little more.

The Walmart-owned warehouse club said Wednesday that it will raise its annual membership fee by $10.

Starting May 1, a basic membership to Sam's Club will cost $60, and its higher-tier option will be $120. Currently, Sam's Club charges $50 for club members and $110 for Plus members.

"We have adjusted our membership pricing to support the things our members love," the company said in a statement to USA Today, citing perks such as its variety, expanded hours and better curbside pickup and delivery options. Brooke Steinberg