WHAT'S NEW DESIGNERS A-Z CLOTHING SHOES HANDBAGS ACCESSORIES BEAUTY MEN KIDS HOME EDITORIAL SALE

STYLE LESSONS with TOVE

The go-to British label for ultra-feminine attire offers five fuss-free ideas for a breezy spring wardrobe.

Tove's Camille Perry and Holly Wright

The Transeasonal Dress

Unable to find easy, multitasking clothes to suit their fast-paced lifestyles, Tove's Camille Perry and Holly Wright decided to make them, adhering to strict sustainability practices in the process. Two years in, their minimal, graceful creations, which are new to BG this season, have found growing favor with stylish women who "appreciate a label with good values," says Wright. Here, the discerning London duo put together five effortless looks to usher in a stress-free spring.

" " CAMILLE

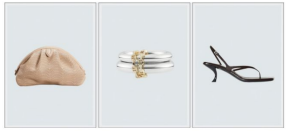

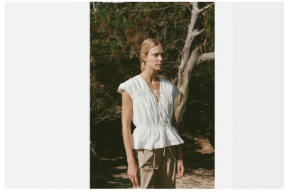

The Occasion Dress

"The strappy silhouette makes this more of a destination piece. It's a little more uncovered. We added contour panels on the side, so it's really generously cut and billows out when you walk. It's so beautiful and simple. Perfect with strappy heels and a minimal clutch for an evening or pre-wedding dinner."

" " HOLLY

The Weekend Top

"This is the ultimate summer top. It's made from organic cotton and features our signature gathered detailing across the bodice that runs throughout the collection. We like to wear it with denim for a relaxed weekend look, but it also looks great with simple jewelry and our silk Nola Trousers for a refined summer evening dinner."

" " CAMILLE

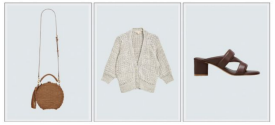

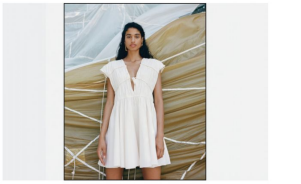

The Sensual Sundress

"This strapless sundress is made of organic stretch cotton, so the fit across the bodice is really lovely. The slightly dropped waistline and softly gathered skirt make it really flattering, too. It would look gorgeous in the city, but equally good if you're on vacation and heading out for lunch. Throw a chunky cardigan over it, and you can go from a day in the city to a summer event, effortlessly."

" " CAMILLE

The Vacation Dress

"Our Clara dress has such a flattering silhouette. The waist has a drawcord and is fully adjustable, which means it can be tied to fit the wearer perfectly. It looks great with flats for a casual daytime look and the slightly shorter length gives the dress a lighter, more playful feel. This is the perfect dress to wear on vacation or on a summer daytrip to the beach."

DESIGNERS SHOES HANDBAGS SALE

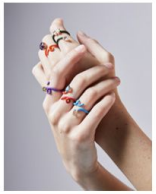

SPOTLIGHT ON... BEA BONGIASCA

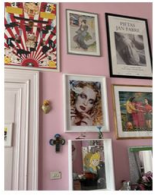

The Italian designer's enamel-painted, gem-adorned jewels have a candy-store appeal that is impossible to resist. Here, she offers some insight into her playful pieces, which are new to BG this season.

THE CONCEPT

"I create just one collection a year and then do capsules, and everything is made by hand in a small town on the Adriatic Coast of Italy. Part of the attraction to jewelry design, rather than fashion, is the slower pace."

THE ARTISTIC ELEMENTS

"My parents collect art, so they cultivated my love of it from a young age. I have one piece by Tadanori Yokoo, who is a graphic designer from Japan; I also like David LaChapelle, Alex Gross and the Japanese artists Keiichi Tanaami and Hajime Sorayama."

THE LOCAL INFLUENCES

"The Memphis Group is a big influence on my work—they were a postmodern design collective based in Milan, my hometown, in the '80s. I love how they were not scared of color or weird shapes."

THE TRAVEL COMPONENT

"Before the pandemic, I used to travel a lot and my trips to Eastern Asia continue to influence me. I appreciate the importance they place on presentation—even for the simplest things. But it's also the colors, the neon lights, and this constant juxtaposition between cityscape and technology that subconsciously lingers in my mind."

THE UPLIFTING EFFECT

"People need positive, colorful things, particularly after this last year. The way I see it, if you're super stressed in your everyday life, one of these earrings or rings can give you a little joy; it's carefree and that energy rubs off on you. This concept has been extra relevant recently, but it's always been my intention."

THE INSPIRATION

Jonathan Ancer's

Betrayal: The Secret Lives of Apartheid Spies

"This collection was conceived during lockdown, and the more people stayed indoors, the more conspiracy theories started to rise. I wasn't an exception! I came across Jonathan Ancer's Betrayal: The Secret Lives of Apartheid Spies and became fascinated by this idea of espionage, spies and the impetus behind committing treason on that scale."

THE CONCEPT

Empower and Educate

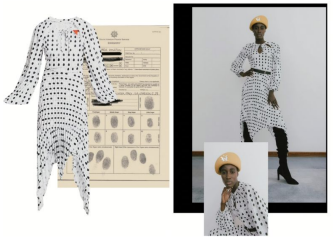

" I WANT TO EMPOWER THE COMMUNITY THAT HELPS TO MAKE THE CLOTHING AND ALSO PASS ON A PIECE OF HISTORY THAT HAS BEEN LONG FORGOTTEN. "

THE CRAFT

Fingerprint Bohemia

"Even though it's subtle, the Fingerprint Bohemia dress represents the entire collection and the intention behind it. From a distance one might think those are just polka dots, but come closer and you'll see it's actually covered in Olivia's fingerprints. It was made in my studio here in Johannesburg from a moss-textured crepe. The pleats were done in Cape Town and the fingerprints in Durban."

DAZED X TORY BURCH: GOOD LUCK STORIES

We're kicking things off with a single question: Do you believe in luck? To celebrate our new Good Luck Trainer, Tory partnered with Dazed on a series of videos spotlighting three creative talents — Ajani Russell, Ashe and Ella Snyder. Directed by Emily Lipson, the short films highlight Ajani, Ashe and Ella's "good luck stories," from lucky rituals to lucky numbers.

Because luck is what you make it.

AJANI RUSSELL

ACTOR, ACTIVIST, SKATEBOARDER, MODEL, ARTIST

"I have a journal that I call my gratitude book; it's my good luck ritual to invite positive energy."

ASHE

SINGER SONGWRITER

"I have a horse necklace that I wear almost every single day and it feels lucky."

ELLA SNYDER

MODEL, PHOTOGRAPHER, YOUTUBER

"I shop for an outfit every time I have something big coming up — and usually end up wearing something that's already in my closet."

VOICES OF NOW

Populated with a diverse and effervescent cast of characters—freckled, gap-toothed, multi-racial—Nadine Jewere's captivating imagery celebrates imperfections and shakes up limited notions of beauty. No wonder it's caught the attention of the fashion world. At 29, the London photographer of Jamaican-Nigerian descent has already lensed a Vogue cover, Dior and Hermes campaigns, and had exhibitions at prestigious galleries in London, Amsterdam and Lagos.

How do you describe your photography style?

"A blend of love and color. Over time, I have been influenced by the people and communities around me—the energy that person gives off, their natural beauty."

What message do you hope people derive from your images?

"I want people to see themselves within my imagery and love what they see. For a long time, this industry has only showcased one type of beauty and it's not a true reflection of the world. I want to celebrate all the beautiful people, who, for so long, were not celebrated."

How do you describe your fashion style?

"I don't place myself in a box. My style is constantly changing and evolving, depending on what point I'm at in my life. I guess one thing that remains consistent is color: I love bold, beautiful colors."

Your work has featured in the Tate Britain Generation Exhibition, Unseen Amsterdam and the Lagos Photo Festival. Which of these achievements has been most meaningful to you and why?

"The Tate was my first exhibition, so it holds a special place. It was also somewhere I'd go as a kid with my parents. Even now, just being there, looking around at all the incredible artists and knowing that my work was also featured on those walls, is a great thing."

What are your hopes for this coming year?

"Togetherness. I am hoping to be with my people again. Close to loved ones, friends and family."

VOICES OF NOW

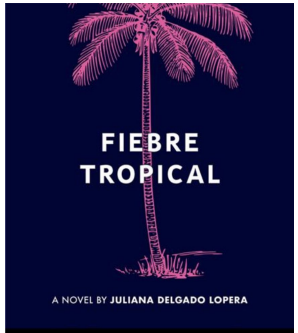

For Juli Delgado Lopera, spinning compelling narratives runs in their blood. "My tías, mom and grandmother are glorious storytellers," says the 32 year-old Colombian author, who identifies as nonbinary. From the award-winning ¡Cuéntamelo!—a bilingual collection of testimonies from LGBT Latinx immigrants, which has garnered a clutch of awards—to their first novel, Fiebre Tropical, which is inspired by their own life emigrating as a teen to the U.S and just received the Ferro-Grumley Award, Delgado Lopera's ebullient prose positions them as an important storyteller for our time.

How would you describe your writing style?

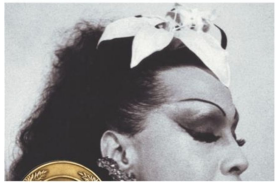

"I'm inspired by the musical textures in the ways immigrants from Latin America and queer people speak. I like to replace "proper" English with a labyrinth of phonetic treasures that know no boundaries. My writing digs into the sounds of the streets that I heard when I first moved from Bogotá to Miami. I am forever scarred by that move, there is never a day when I do not think about Bogotá and its mountains."

What can you tell us about your latest book, Fiebre Tropical?

"My first novel was an experimentation with storytelling and a way for me to make sense of one of the most profoundly impactful events of my life: moving from Colombia to the U.S. The loneliness, the boredom, the sadness, a bit of excitement for a new life, while never quite leaving the other one behind."

¡Cuéntamelo!
TESTIMONIOS DE INMIGRANTES LATINOS LGBT

Your work has garnered a number of prestigious awards—which one is most meaningful to you?

"Any recognition of my work is a nod that keeps me going. It is humbling to know that my writing resonates with people. Awards provide a career and confidence boost. I remind myself constantly that my art is important because it is how I process and connect to the world."

How do you describe your fashion style?

"Fashion is an essential part of who I am. It is crucial to my self-expression. Clothes let me move beyond the blandness of normativity. Most of my influences have come from watching queer children show up in outrageous fashions at a party and inside thinking, yes perra I'm living for that!"

What message do you hope the next generation of aspiring writers get from your work?

"Possibility. I am a transsexual sissy with a passion for literature, storytelling and fashion, who went to an all-girls private school in Bogotá, Colombia. I have a nun for a tía and my family is deeply religious. My current life is incongruent with everything I was taught was possible."

The shape of a wishbone — a symbol of luck — embedded in its sole. Designed for forward momentum...because luck is what you make of it. Symbols of luck from around the world have always fascinated Tory. The evil eye, knocking on wood and, a family tradition, carrying a red ribbon wherever she travels.

Our trainer combines flattering lines and comfort: a deep ankle scoop that elongates the leg, an oversized ergonomic sole for lift, and our Double T logo set at an angle. Innovative construction balances support and softness. A structural wishbone within the cushioned midsole acts as a cambrion, reinforcing the shoe's internal support system.

PRODUCT DETAILS

Our Ballet Loafer is an interpretation of two classics — the flexibility of a ballet slipper with the profile of a loafer. The insole provides performance-level comfort, ruched sides allow for movement and front treads add traction. It is crafted in soft patent leather and detailed with Double T hardware. The shoe's edges are hand-painted and the stitching on its strap, the keeper, is done by hand. Chic and easy to wear.
