It's finally, finally spring after a very long, cold winter. This year seemed especially brutal (particularly if you're on the East Coast, as I unfortunately am), so I'm sure everyone is eager to dive headfirst into the new season. Before you run outside to enjoy the sunshine and warm weather, though, you should check out your spring horoscope.

The Fun, No-Hassle Swap That Brought the Heat Back Into Our Relationship it doesn't have to be complicated to be exciting !!

We didn't just survive the winter. Eclipse season ended at the beginning of March, and Mercury retrograde ended on March 20. So you can sit back, relax, and breathe a big sigh of relief before reading what spring has in store for you below.

Important Dates to Know

- March 20: Aries season begins
- April 1: Full moon in Libra
- April 17: New moon in Aries
- April 19: Taurus season begins
- May 1: Full moon in Scorpio
- May 16: New moon in Taurus
- May 20: Gemini season begins
- May 31: Full moon in Sagittarius

Aries

It's your season, and Mercury retrograde just ended, so get ready to celebrate. You're the center of attention right now, so use that to your advantage to apply for a new job or get your crush's attention. The full moon in Libra is an especially good time to take stock of your romantic relationships. You might realize you're unhappy with your current relationship, or you might get clear about what you're looking for in a partner. Taurus season could be a good opportunity to reevaluate your budget and spending habits. When Gemini season arrives, you'll have more writing or presenting at work or school. Be sure to brush up on your grammar and public speaking skills ahead of time.

Taurus

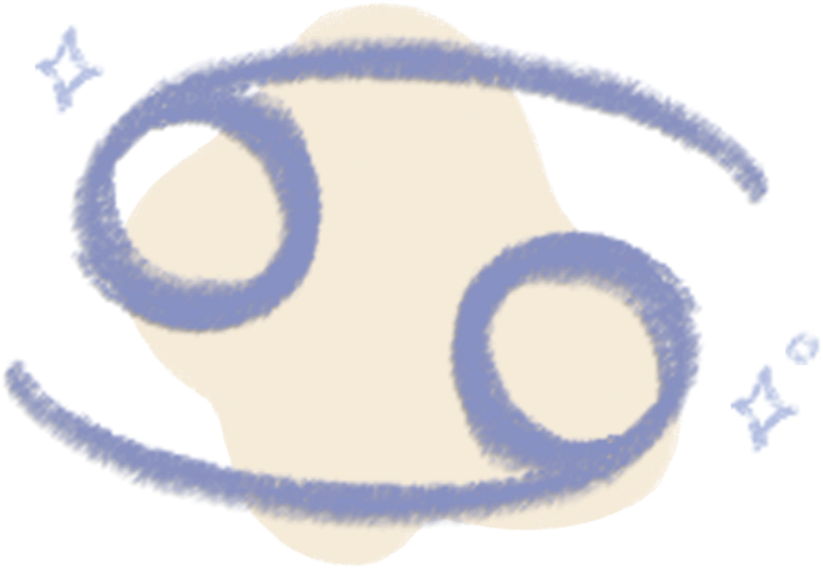

Lean into your true Taurus nature as a homebody during Aries season. Plan a spa day or a massage to refresh your body and mind. Your season arrives on April 19, and with it comes much more activity. Around the new moon in Taurus, you might be reconsidering your personal goals. It's a good time to write down what you're hoping to achieve in the next year, since Taurus season acts as your own new year. During Gemini season, you might have a little too much fun treating yourself. As much as you love luxury, make sure you try to stick to a budget during this time period, and don't let your spending get too out of hand.

Gemini

After Pisces season, which was focused on work, you'll feel the relief of getting out and seeing friends during Aries season. Consider joining a book club or sports league, or signing up to volunteer to meet new people. You might even want to attend a few networking events. Taurus season will slow things down for you. Geminis like you tend to be extremely social, but this is a great opportunity to prioritize your alone time. You'll need that relaxation because your season starts on May 20, and it'll shine lots of attention your way. Start making plans ahead of time to make sure you can squeeze everyone into your calendar and don't end up overbooking yourself.

Cancer

With Aries season taking over the part of your chart associated with work, it's time to lock in on your career goals. The new moon in Aries could bring new opportunities, whether it's within your current role or a totally new job. As a Cancer, you're typically known as being a homebody, but Taurus season is your time to get out and socialize. Your friends will be thrilled that you're the one begging to go out for a change. Try to make the most of it because come Gemini season, you'll want to focus on yourself. Rest, recharge, and prioritize your mental health during this time to prepare for your season, which is just around the corner.

Leo

If you're not already jetting off on a major trip during Aries season, it's the ideal time for you to start planning one. Even if you can't find anyone to travel with, think about booking a solo vacay. Your career will be the main focus of Taurus season. Around May 16, you could get a job offer you've been hoping for, you might be asked to take on new responsibilities at work, or you might be working with colleagues you haven't interacted with much before. But you'll still have time to play before spring ends. Gemini season will be filled with plans with friends. Consider hosting a dinner party or inviting friends out to try a new restaurant.

Virgo

Aries season is a great opportunity for you to start investing your money or to discuss finances with your significant other. Around the new moon in Aries, you could even get money you weren't expecting, like a raise at work. Then, it's time to put on your learning hat during Taurus season. Sign up for that pottery class you've been thinking about, apply to grad schools, or browse a different section of a local bookstore. You might have a lot going on at your job during Gemini season, so try not to get too stressed out over it. Remember that sometimes done is better than perfect.

Libra

With the full moon in Libra and the new moon in Aries, you'll be rethinking your goals and relationships. You could start dating someone you see potential in, or you and your partner might be taking the next step. Spend one-on-one time with the person you're dating, whether you're in the early stages or have been together for years. Gemini season is the perfect excuse to take an international or cross-country trip, so start planning your PTO days now. You also might become interested in a new subject or book genre. Google online classes you can take, or head to your favorite bookstore to do some browsing.

Scorpio

Take advantage of Aries season to do some spring cleaning at home and at work. Take care of those boring admin tasks at your job so you can finally clear them off your list, and go through your closet to get rid of clothes you don't really need anymore—you're never going to wear that top you haven't touched in 10 years. During Taurus season, carve out time to connect with your partner or close friends. The new moon in Taurus will help you get clear about what you're looking for in a relationship, too. Money will be on your mind during Gemini season, whether you're trying to be better about your budget or researching investments. At the end of the season, review how you did to see if your efforts paid off (pun intended).

Sagittarius

Start a new hobby, or update your dating apps during Aries season. It's a time for play and romance, which is right up your alley. If you're already dating someone, plan a date doing something you don't normally do, like taking a cooking class. Taurus season is an ideal time for you to try to stick to a schedule, which isn't something that comes super naturally to you. Try to get into a workout routine, or make a cleaning and organizing plan for your house to tidy up everything you've been putting off. When Gemini season arrives, you'll be focused on your close relationships, like significant others and good friends. While you love a group hang, consider planning some one-on-one dinners to catch up.

Capricorn

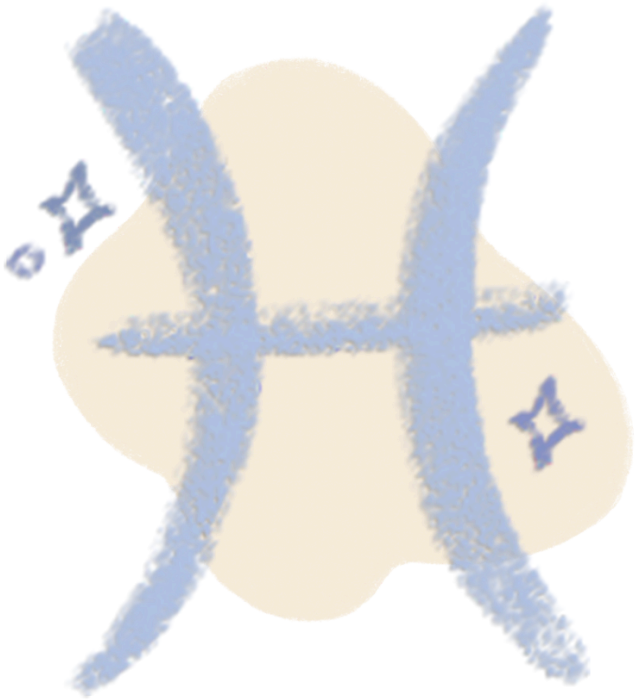

Aries season highlights the area of your birth chart that focuses on home and family. Use this season to plan a surprise visit to your parents or to start searching for new houses if you're planning to move. You'll move on from family time to dating time when Taurus season arrives. Schedule time with just you and your partner, or make an effort to get out more and meet potential partners if you're single. Loosen up a little during this time, Capricorn, and let yourself get lost in hobbies rather than work for a change. Don't worry about getting out of your usual routine because there's plenty of time for that during Gemini season, when you'll want to get organized and catch up on errands.

Aquarius

You'll be in your element during Aries season, as it's all about communication for you. Whether you're writing for fun or working on a report at work, take advantage of this energy to let the words flow freely. As an Aquarius, you enjoy reading and learning, and this is a great time to lean into that, too. Use the Taurus season energy to rearrange furniture or hang art that you've had sitting around for ages. If you're considering moving, now's the ideal time to start looking. You tend to be a head-over-heart type, but you might find yourself feeling more romantic than usual during Gemini season. Plan a special evening for you and your partner, or try to put yourself out there more to meet new people.

Pisces

Brush up on your skills in your career, whether it's public speaking, writing reports, or working on managerial duties. If you've been thinking about freelancing or starting your own business, now's the perfect time for that, too. Start reaching out to people on LinkedIn, or attend a networking event to put your feelers out there. Feeling a little cooped up after winter? Plan a weekend or day trip during Taurus season to get out and enjoy the warmer weather. Definitely take advantage of that Taurus energy because you won't feel like leaving home much during Gemini season. It'll be a good time to tidy up your house, consider redecorating, or move.
