What to do While You're Waiting for your Colorado Teardrop Trailer

Trust us, if we could build your teardrop trailer in a day, we'd do that. But putting quality craftsmanship into a teardrop trailer built to last generations takes time. And it is absolutely worth the wait!

We do have some ideas to help you get prepped for that glorious day when your teardrop camper trailer is ready.

Ask Questions!

There are so many other teardrops trailer owners who have great ideas, hacks, advice, and experience to share with you. Getting in touch with other Colorado Teardrop camper owners can be just what you need to ease you into teardrop life.

Our Colorado Teardrop Owners Facebook Group (https://web.archive.org/web/20220328160810/https://www.facebook.com/groups/MyCOTeardrop) can help. Join and learn about where to camp, what to bring, where to pick up the best accessories and more. And, if you don't see an answer to your question, feel free to ask away. We started this group so owners can have a place to ask and share and we've found everyone in this group helpful and open to sharing what they have learned.

Read All About It!

We LOVE camping! And we love to share what we've learned about camping, teardrop trailers and more. Our blog, "Teardrop Life (https://web.archive.org/web/20220328160810/https://coloradoteardrops.com/staging/6616/teardrop-life/)," covers more than just teardrop trailers, but also camping hacks, great locations, common challenges, and much more. Read on to learn more. And, if there is a topic you'd like to see covered, please let us know. We'd be happy to do a little research and cover it.

Treat yourself to a lovely new notebook to keep track of your adventures! Keeping track of where you've traveled can help you decide what is next or where you'd like to go back.

Get Your Map Out!

Now that you have a smaller camper trailer, you'll be able to visit many more places – beautiful locations that the larger RVs can't get to. Start mapping out all the beautiful places you can go – National Parks, Bureau of Land Management sites and more. The possibilities are (nearly) endless.

And while you're at it, make sure you check the rules and regulations about all the great new places on your list and look at the state departments of tourism, chambers of commerce and any resource you can find online. Likely your journey and your destination contain some hidden gems, so don't miss out!

Make a List and Check it Twice!

Camping in a Colorado Teardrop is much different than tent camping or car camping – you're going to want some gear for your new ride. You'll want to deck out your dedicated galley for meal prep and storage for starters. Then, you'll need bedding for your interior. You'll also have some storage options, so you'll need some organization. Keep a running list of what you'll need, and then you can look for deals and sales to get your new teardrop trailer outfitted.

We know...the waiting is the hardest part. But you can help the time fly by with research, preparation and just a tiny bit of daydreaming.

It may be hard to be patient, but it will be worth the wait!
