

As Father's Day Nears ...

... on June 20, we remember Kobe Bryant as one of the greatest basketball players of all time, and as a loving father to Gianna, a middle-schooler with hoop dreams of her own.

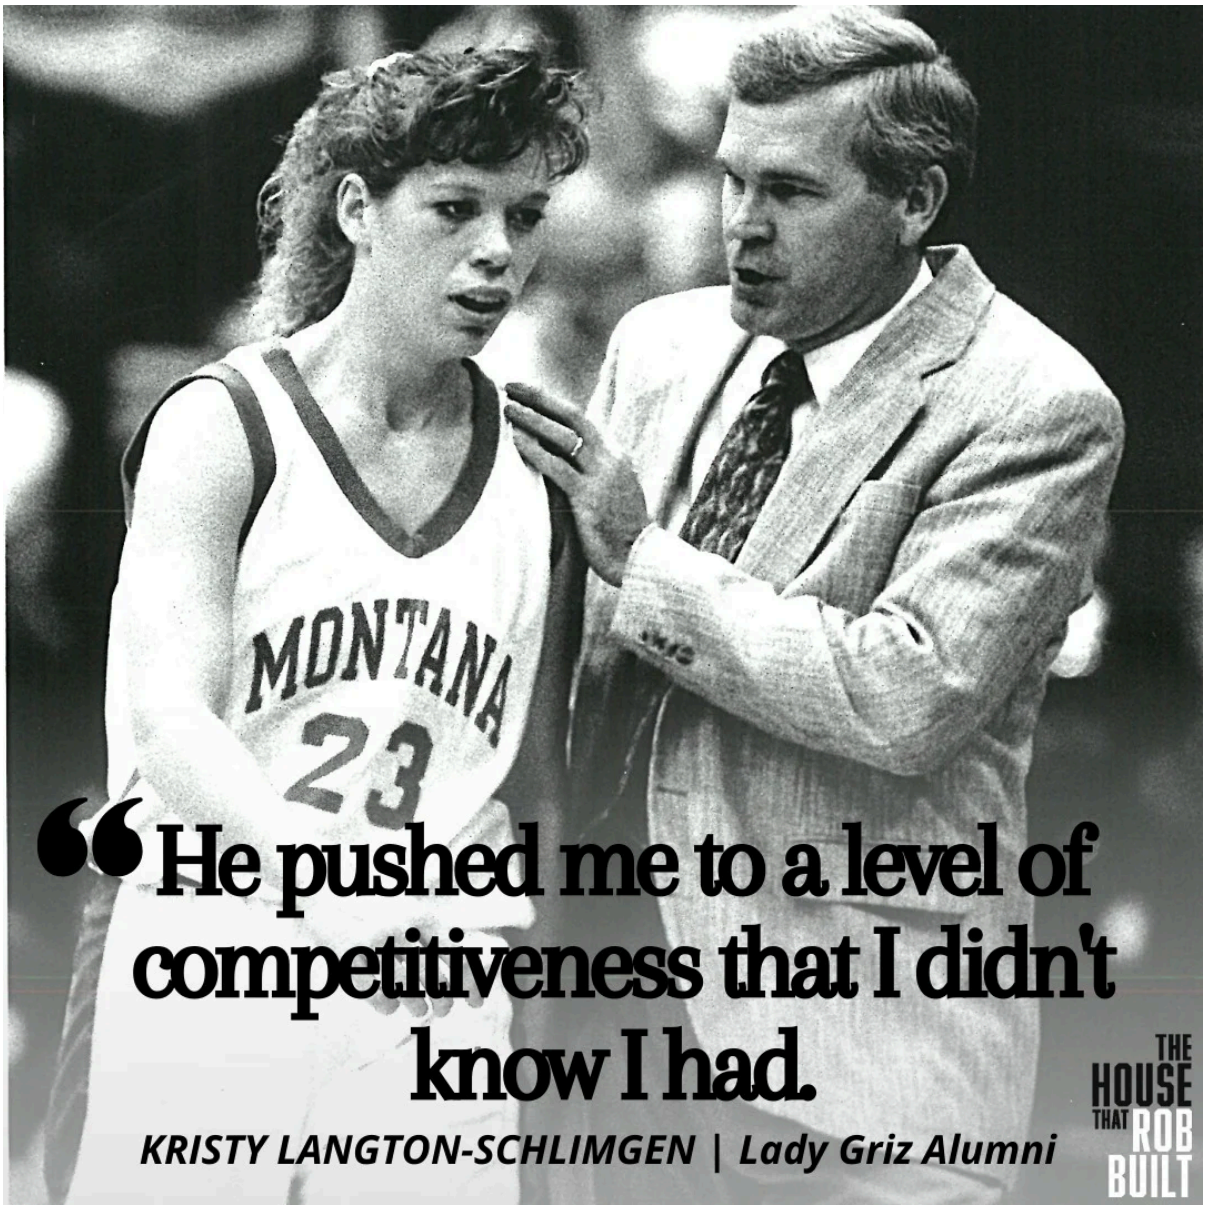

As Bryant once told ESPN anchor Elle Duncan, "I would have five more girls if I could. I'm a 'girl dad'."

Their loss in January 2020 was a tragedy, but Kobe's love for Gianna and his other daughters turned #GirlDad into a national slogan.

The House That Rob Built celebrates the athletic prowess of generations of Lady Griz basketball players at the University of Montana. But, behind each of those young women were people who loved and believed in them, and for many, that included a #GirlDad.

Father's Day weekend is the perfect time to find the inspiring men in your life and share with them the story of Robin Selvig, who was like a second father to the Lady Griz players over his 38 years as coach.

THE HOUSE THAT ROB BUILT

The inspiring story of Rob Selvig, pioneering coach of the University of Montana's Lady Griz basketball team. In an era when gender discrimination in sports was the norm, Coach Selvig built a "house" of inclusion and empowerment by recruiting female athletes from the ranches, farms and Native reservations of Big Sky Country. For nearly 40 years, these athletes would establish the preeminent women's basketball program west of the Rockies.
