

A POWERHOUSE TRIO CELEBRATES 50 YEARS OF WOMEN'S SPORTS!

Fifty years ago, a landmark piece of legislation changed women's athletics forever, leading to greater sports participation, funding and scholarships. In honor of the anniversary of Title IX of the Civil Rights Act, THE HOUSE THAT ROB BUILT sponsored a wide-ranging discussion with three powerhouses in the world of women's college basketball.

On the panel is the subject of our film, University of Montana women's basketball head coach Robin Selvig. Joining him are recently retired Arizona State women's basketball head coach Charli Turner Thorne, who did a lot of winning with the Sun Devils; and former Lady Griz player Jeanne McNulty-King, now president and CEO of sports agency 2X, Inc., which specializes in women athletes.

The moderator is Kate O'Hare, Social Media Content Manager and blog editor for Family Theater Productions.

Click HERE or on the picture above to watch the video of this dynamic conversation, first streamed live on the Facebook page for THE HOUSE THAT ROB BUILT.

Family Theater Productions

Family Theater Productions, 7201 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, CA 90046, 323-874-6633

Unsubscribe Manage preferences