EYEBRIGHT

written by Odette Auger, Enrolled member of Sagamok Anishnawbek

"'Eyebright' is told by Odette Auger's main character: a mother and painter who is living in her painting studio in her family's backyard. Auger's attention to sensual detail is reminiscent of the process of oil painting itself. We very much want to read the entire novel of which 'Eyebright' is a part—publishers, pay attention to this writer!"

indigenousvoicesawards

indigenousvoicesawards Emerging Indigenous voices continue to shape the future of literature through powerful storytelling, poetry, and lived experience. The Indigenous Voices Awards are proud to recognize the 2026 recipients in the Unpublished categories.

Congratulations to Odette Auger, Dawn Dionne, Daly Quintal, Cooper Skjeie, Kieran Kalls Rice, kit-xgwélemc kennedy, Michelle Poirier Brown, and Kennedy Willier.

Through stories and poems grounded in identity, healing, humour, family, language, and place, these writers and poets remind us of the importance of uplifting emerging Indigenous voices and creating space for stories that deserve to be heard.

Each recipient receives a prize of $500 for their outstanding writing. Their IVAs-recognized work will also be shared with Yarrow Magazine (@yarrowlitmag) for future publishing consideration.
