

Worth a Shot

Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana, we love you. Many of us grew up here, others chose to live here. We will do anything we can to take care of you. You are our neighbors, our friends, and our family.

Sometimes you have hard conversations with family. This is one of them.

Right now our adult hospitals are strained with Covid-19 patients.

And the overwhelming majority of those patients are unvaccinated.

Without immediate action, our hospitals will be too full to treat those with the virus and those with other serious illnesses or injuries. As care providers, we are terrified of that becoming reality.

But like many families facing a crisis, our community can rally together and take action to get through this one. And if we can prevent just one more person from becoming seriously ill, it's worth a shot.

- Get vaccinated. The best way to avoid serious illness is the vaccine. And if you're already vaccinated, get your booster.
- Keep taking all the standard precautions like social distancing, avoiding large gatherings, and of course, wear a mask – even if you're vaccinated.
- Test to prevent spread. If you have symptoms, get tested at your pharmacy, urgent care or physician's office. Not the ER.

Then please encourage neighbors, friends, and family to take all those steps, too. It's worth a shot.
