Why Should I Invest in Outdoor Signs for My Business?

Outdoor business signs cater to various industries, spanning from retail business to a shop or an event venue. The sign could be simply used for guidance with directional signage and extends deeper to promoting the sale of products and services unique to your business.

When considering outdoor business signs, the 3-30-3 rule is crucial:

Within 3 seconds, most visitors engage with the sign briefly.

If the display succeeds in capturing attention, visitors might spend around 30 seconds absorbing the main information.

For displays that effectively captivate viewers thematically and visually, the engagement can extend to 3 minutes, allowing for a thorough examination of the content.

Which Type Of Outdoor Signs Would be the Most Effective to Promote My Business?

The popular choice for businesses' outdoor signage tends to be street post signs. They serve well for shop ads, promotions and spots like parking areas, forecourts and wall mounted store fronts. Outdoor signs carry your brand's image even during closed hours, so selecting the right one matters.

What Content Should My Outdoor Sign Include?

What your external signs should display depends on their type and intended purpose.

Your external front business signs might suffice with just your company name, although a sign with an impactful slogan or logo could also be effective.

Directional signage guides individuals to a specific location like a parking area, indoor reception, shop entrance or exit. The external signage or banners must be sizable for visibility at a distance and post clear easily readable content.
