WATERWISE

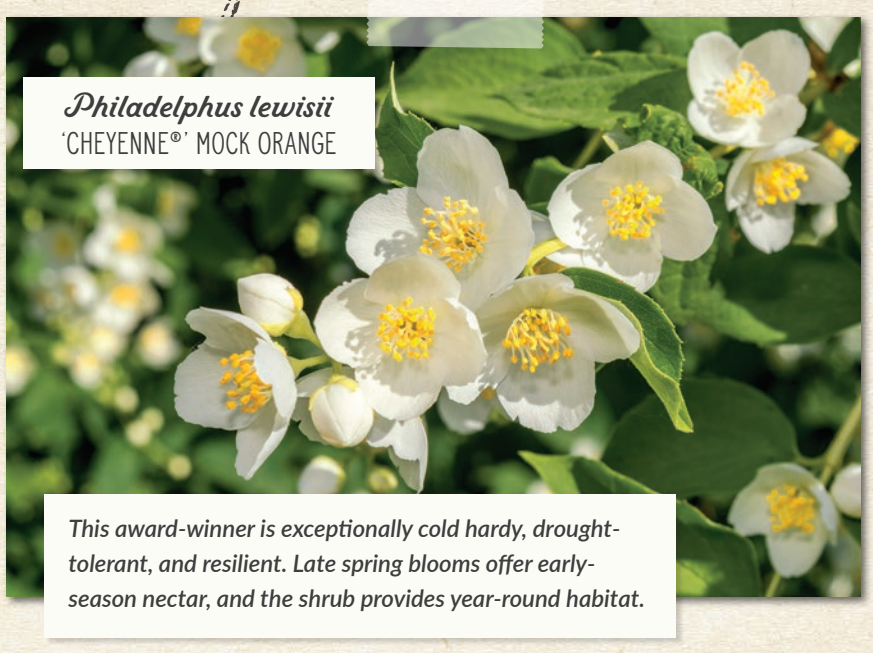

With the right plants, your garden can do more than just survive dry conditions – it can thrive. Conserving water in our yards with xeriscaping is one of the most important ways we can all contribute to a healthy ecosystem.

NATURAL NECTAR

Observing bees, butterflies, moths, and hummingbirds in our yards is one of the most rewarding experiences of gardening. Pollinators are the pulse of the planet! Fill your yard with the natural nectar they need to support pollinator populations.

HABITAT CREATION

Plants play a vital role in the ecosystem that connects us all. Birds and insects rely on plants for food and refuge, but their habitats are disappearing across the country. Don't let your yard be a biological wasteland – plant for a yard full of life.

Philadelphus lewisii 'CHEYENNE®' MOCK ORANGE

This award-winner is exceptionally cold hardy, drought-tolerant, and resilient. Late spring blooms offer early-season nectar, and the shrub provides year-round habitat.

REDUCE YOUR LAWN Increase your Curb Appeal!

In this gorgeous front yard garden, our customer Ann K. planted a beautiful array of nectar-rich blooms that draw bees, butterflies, and hummingbirds to her yard. Sunny yellow blooms complement rich violet and magenta flower spikes, while the mix of airy plant forms makes this eye-catching garden a bright spot in the neighborhood.
