Indigenous Workshops

By Siksika Media

Dual workshops based in Blackfoot tipi traditions and Metis culture and values were held at the Ernie Starr Arena in Calgary, Alta on May 6 & 7.

“It’s a wonderful opportunity,” says Krista White, AFCC Event Organizer. “Especially for our youth here in the city of Calgary, Indigenous and non-Indigenous.”

The project titled, Tipi and Trapper Tent Project, is being used for public exhibition in the coming months. A Metis canvas introduced participants to Metis culture, sharing humor and Indigenous knowledge while learning how to sew and bead.

“We’re representing Metis that we’re here in the early, early days,” says Janis Laboucane, facilitating the Trapper Tent project.

Laboucane says she is excited to share about Metis history from any body who’d like to ask.

Email Krista White at KJWhite@AFC-Calgary.org for more information on the workshops, in partnership with the City of Calgary.

Court house sentencing aims to raise awareness about domestic violence on the nation

By Floyd Black Horse

Barry Junior Yellowfly, of Siksika Nation, receives eleven years for the manslaughter death of Mardi Broad Scalplock, 33, after court proceedings on Apr. 26 at the Siksika courthouse in Siksika, Alta.

“I kept praying for justice for my granddaughter. I really support my family and they had so much courage to get up there and present their impact statements,” says Ruth Scalplock, the grandmother immediately after sentencing.

Between 9:30 am and 4:30 pm, an emotional day including a peaceful rally of support, a summons to appear and several impact statements from relatives of Broad Scalplock happened inside and outside of the courthouse.

The peaceful rally, said Mildred Scalplock, Broad Scalplock’s mother, is intended to raise awareness about domestic violence on the nation but also address the issues of the Gladue report being submitted in the case. The Gladue report is a form of document used before sentencing which considers

Cluny old residential school demolition site

By Floyd Black Horse

A Cluny Old Residential School Site Building Demolition and Rehabilitation Kick-off meeting at the grounds surrounding the Holy Trinity Church in Siksika, Alta., began Apr. 26.

Site cleanup and topsoil layering and hydroseed of all areas are the remaining tasks in Phase II of the six month project. Areas such as the playground, parking lot and Parish Hall are being completed.

As most of the demolition is done, rhubarb and crumbles of stone are left from the former sites.

Danielle Nyarko, Water Resources Engineer, helps coordinate the project and is tasked with site cleanup and getting it back to a condition where people can use it safely.

“It’s been really fun,” says Nyarko. “As Project Coordinator, it has been interesting working with the

the history of Aboriginal offenders. Some of the background might include how colonial trauma or inter-generational effects resulting from Residential school violence may have played a role in the offender’s livelihood.

“In this case, there is a joint submission between council. Although we already have a good and strong sense of what’s going to happen here today, the judge ultimately has the final say,” said Crown prosecutor Ron Seminik. “But I can tell you that council have diligently reviewed all the law and we have a Gladue report before the court and pre-sentence report and I can tell you all those documents and the law have been considered arriving at the end conclusion that we’ve come to and basically inform us of the appropriate sentence.”

The judge issued a warrant for Yellow Fly to be present in the courtroom early in the day rather than appear via video as expected. Approximately 25 family members and 10 of Yellow Fly’s relatives sat in the courtroom gallery hearing emotionally charged impact statements and sentiments of forgiveness said throughout the afternoon.

nation, the contractors and even in the demolition field. I think, things come up unexpected so you must think quickly and see how you can work around certain problems that come up so lots of learning and a neat experience.”

The topsoil is a big part of the finishing dates, which aims to level the ground and restore the site back to its natural state.

Surrounding the Holy Trinity Church, which remains at its current location, are plans for a new community hall to be used by community members.

the offender, spoke on behalf of Yellowfly’s family in the courtroom where recordings were not allowed, saying words such as “I’m sorry” and “We loved Mardi, too” and seeking forgiveness from the deceased’s relatives for the fatal actions of their close relative.

Coun. Marsha Wolf Collar, Siksika Nation, says advocacy is an important part of community healing.

“We’re all closely related,” says Wolf Collar. “Jill’s words were powerful because it helps not only the family but helps me as a community member and elected official to hear those things. We need to move in that direction of healing. But at the same time, we can continue to support them and Mardi’s son and siblings and her mom. WE just need to continue to come together as a community and find ways and strategies how we can work together to better our community.”

ka membership before the building was taken down.

“This Parish Hall had been here for quite a few years. It meant a lot to a lot of people here. Not just on the east end of the nation but anybody that had any association with it. Back in the day, they use to have dances, meetings in here, some powwows, wakes, funerals, and all that so it was the heartbeat of the east end, as we did not have a community center down here, so Parish Hall acted as our community center.”

Expected completion of project is late May-Early June.

Pet Clinic

By Floyd Black Horse

Pet animals were brought to the Gordon Yellow Fly Memorial Arbour on April 21 for a Dog and Cat Wellness clinic.

“There are so many pets here today,” says Alana Collicut, providing a tour of the clinic on day 1 of the three-day event. Reception volunteers registered over 100 loved pets for a weekend check-up.

PetSmart Charities and the Canadian Animal Task force were on-site with volunteers helping out the service. This is the 11th year the Animal Wellness clinic has been brought to Siksika for community members to get their animal spayed or neutered, tattooed, and vaccinated and treated for parasites (worms and fleas).

Wait times varied as pets were being registered. They were being examined such as being weighed, undergoing surgery, and safely being taken care of in recovery.

One of the pet owners, Leandra Waterchief, registered her pet which was taken in for a single night of care. Her pet was recently taken to a vet for an injury, and she needed to put up a Go Fund Me page for the cost of services she was unable to cover.

After registering her pet which saved her hundreds of dollars in vet fees, Waterchief says, “I learned my dog is an Australian German Shepherd.”

A variety of crate sizes for large and small pets shared the floor. By the sound of the barking, most pets were excited or nervous about the experience.

Most of the kittens brought into the clinic had a bowl of food for them in Cat rooms 1 and 2.

“They [Siksika Community members] love their kitties too,” says Collicut.

As chaotic as the scene was at the Arbour, Collicut managed to walk us through a busy day.

“It is fun. We love dealing with the community. We love talking to the community and hearing about their stories.”

For more information on the animal clinic, call Siksika Animal Services at (403) 734-3815.

Supporting Siksika Nation's policing transition

Alberta's government is supporting Indigenous self-administered policing with a partnership with Siksika Nation, including $75,000 that was provided to help the nation finalize its business case.

By Dylan Topal, Alberta Public Safety and Emergency Services (Originally published on Government of Alberta webpage)

In a signing ceremony April 24 in Calgary, Alberta's government and Siksika Nation signed a letter of intent to formalize a partnership with the Government of Canada that will lead to a plan for Siksika Nation to transition to a self-administered police service. The letter of intent will be finalized by sending it to the federal government for signing.

“Support for self-policing is a strong step towards meaningful reconciliation. Alberta's government will continue to partner with communities that want to develop their own policing model. We're pleased to support Siksika Nation as they research the financial and logistical challenges that would accompany a complex transition process,” says Mike Ellis, Minister of Public Safety and Emergency Services. “This agreement will ensure the handover from the RCMP to the new police service takes place without any interruptions in vital services to local residents.”

As part of their work, the province and Siksika Nation will work together to develop a clear operational timeline and negotiate a transition agreement with the federal government.

“One of Siksika leadership's top priorities is to help improve the quality of life for our people,” says Chief Ouray Crowfoot of Siksika Nation. “Safety and security are basic human needs to improve life expectancy, quality and quantity of life. It is paramount for our people to feel safe in their own community. Siksika Nation's re-establishment of our own Siksika-administered police service will go a long way towards improving our people's quality of life.”

The Siksika Nation and the governments of Alberta and Canada reached a deal in the summer of 2022 allowing the nation to take over policing responsibilities from the RCMP.

Quick Facts

- This agreement creates Canada's first self-administered First Nation police service in 14 years.
- In 2018, Alberta's government provided the Siksika Nation with a $30,000 Community Policing Grant to fund a feasibility study that led to the 2022 signing of a memorandum of understanding focused on developing a funding framework for a new police service in Siksika.

Women's Conference

By Tyrone Sitting Eagle

From April 18th to the 20th, Siksika Family Services Corporation (SFS) hosted Aakiiks Ikskoonatap-siia'ah - Women are Strong event, in recognition of all women. At the women's conference, organizations such as Siksika Children's Services (SCS) and Siksika Employment and Training (SETS) made sure that there were speakers and activities geared towards healing, resilience, and entrepreneurship.

“The first day you will see that we had more or less healing, and doctors and things of that nature. The second day was more about resilience, and then we had entrepreneurs speak, and to the end of today, we continued with journeys, peoples' journeys, and employment and challenges that they faced,” said Ivonne Crane, Executive Director for the Social Development of Siksika Family Services Corporation.

“We are all very busy managers, and executive director, and so forth, finance is very busy in our day-to-day jobs and so forth, we realized that the way this is all going to come together that we need to identify an individual that could take the concepts and make them a reality.

Eulalia Running Rabbit is the Events Coordinator and has lots of experience in running big events, and with other departments being busy with other tasks, they realized that there needed to be an individual who could make everything possible and organize the event.

SFS, Siksika Income Support (SFI), and SETS Manager Daniel Stimson were the main sponsors of the event. Stimson is a major sponsor, if there was any information that was needed for the event, Stimson made sure that Running Rabbit had all the things she needed.

“He was the major number one sponsor,” stated Crane.

Department updates

At the Museum

By Shilo Clark, Museum Communications

Blackfoot Crossing Historical Park (BCHP) has had numerous traffic and activities over the past few months. You may have noticed some construction on our trail paths, in the front of the building and in our Tipi village. We are pleased and excited to announce some major park developments that will be opening in this summer. We at BCHP have wanted to enhance and update our infrastructure in the park for a considerable amount of time so that visitors can come enjoy the view as they stroll through the park.

An Elders Gathering area is being landscaped so that visitors will come upon a newly vibrant green grass that will be managed by a new sprinkler system to ensure preservation of the grass. Included will be a digital board that elders and guests will be able to view as they take in the prairie weather. This digital board will be featured with QR code technology that will provide our guests with additional information about Blackfoot Crossing and the Museum as a whole. For ease and accessibility, we have built new pathways and sidewalks, as well as a tour bus drop off zone. We have improved our wider pathway system that extends throughout the park, additionally these paths will direct you towards Poundmaker's former gravesite and the Blackfoot Treaty Commemoration Monument. We are excited to share our pathways with all who visit our park; however, we do ask that guests don't ride any off-road/all-terrain vehicles and ATVs on the pathways so we can maintain a fun and safe experience for everybody.

We are so excited to announce we will be bringing back our monthly History Webinars with Grant Many Heads, as well as new Exhibit Webinars from Shilo Clark. Grant will also resume his post as Interpretive Tour Guide. We are so pleased to have Grant spread his knowledge and educate each guest that comes through our doors. Keep an eye out for Exhibit Webinars every 3rd Wednesday of the month and for History Webinar on the 2ndlast Wednesday of each month. Additionally, we will also be hosting Blackfoot Language Webinars with Joanne Red Old Man that will be hosted every 4th Wednesday.

We are happy to announce Shilo Clark as our new Museum Exhibits Communications Coordinator. Shilo will be working with Shayde Yellow Old Woman, or current Communications Team. They will keep the community up to date with any events and activities that are happening at the park, as well as maintain a strong relationship between Blackfoot Crossing and our partner organizations. Join us in wishing them success in those endeavours.

Blackfoot Way

By Ryan Hall, Housing Manager

On April 17 and 21, Siksika Housing and the University of Calgary School of Architecture presented in Calgary and at Blackfoot Crossing on the results of a unique collaboration to design housing in a Blackfoot way.

Over 4 months beginning in January, students in the final year of the Master's of Architecture program worked with Housing staff, Elder's and Nation Members to put together new housing designs based in Blackfoot culture and ideas.

The results were several beautiful presentations and models that will be donated to Housing for display in their reception area. We look forward to continuing this work with the U of C in the future!

Janitorial Workshops: Enhancing Safety and Skills with Challenge Industries Ltd.

Challenge Industries Ltd. is providing interactive one-day workshops for janitors to learn the latest cleaning methods, tools and equipment. In addition to cleaning techniques, the workshops also cover safety procedures, communication skills, customer service and WHMIS certification.

The monthly workshops are designed to help janitors clean more efficiently and work in a safer environment. Participants can also connect with others in the industry and learn from industry leaders who are invited to speak. Challenge Industries Ltd. Collaborates with organizations and individuals to customize the workshops to their specific needs. Whether you are a commercial cleaning company or an individual janitor, these workshops are a great way to enhance your skills and knowledge.

To learn more or sign up for a workshop, email info@challengeindustries.ca or call 1-866-734-5117 and ask for Duane, who will be happy to provide more information and answer any questions you may have.
